Honorable Prime Minister of India,

Under your leadership the Indian government has completed its first year in office, I personally congratulate you on behalf of Ananda hi Ananda. I also send you and other colleagues my warm wishes on Ganga Dussehra, a holy day remembered in India of Maa Ganga as a decent from heaven to earth.

Every successful civilisation since the advent of human being has one thing in common, that they have tried and been successful to give a wonderful life to their villages and farmers. This is very important for any nation or civilisation to have space for villagers and farmers, since the farmer produces grains to feed the population, to provide a space for food sustainability and make nation rich with its resources whereas villages protect and enrich art, culture, crafts, heritage, and natural resources.

It has been very unfortunate for India that even after completing so many years of Independence, our farmers and villagers are still living a life which can be explained in only a single word "Misery".

They have been exploited for centuries; it's a subject of grave concern for me personally. The blame for the miseries of farmers cannot be put on the government solely but also the citizens of India. The need of today is that the government of India and Indian citizens should act together and free Indian villages from their miseries. If Indian farmers and villagers would not find their life sustainable, I doubt; India can ever become a model country.

I have been trying and putting efforts from spiritual arena to pave a way to free Indian farmers and villagers from their miseries. I with many other people have undertaken foot marches to reach Indian villages and farmers. We are going to walk all over in India, to visit villages, to understand their problems firsthand. We are not going to Indian villages by having some predated theories of their problem but trying to learn and document their issues, thus we can send these details to concerned departments. It is basically a grand foot march that will bring back a detailed study of Indian villages.

During our first Foot march which was done in Yavatmal region in the month of April we have found that the problems of villagers have never been understood. They have some other problems but altogether different solutions are given; it's like one has a pain in the stomach but doctors have administered the drugs for headache. This has done a great harm, stomach is still painful and on top of that headache has started by administration of wrong drugs.

Ananda hi Ananda is a spiritual organisation and believes in dialogue and collaborations; instead of harbouring thoughts of what has not been done or what could have been done; we are thinking what we can do now. We are compiling a detailed report of each and every district after having direct dialogues with farmers and villagers for the government departments as eventually it would be the government that has to take the right actions or steps. We as an individual and citizen are doing what we can do best, we are introducing the nation with the real problems of farmers and villagers and bringing the reality to the government department, I hope government of India and other state governments will also do their needful duties.

It's most unfortunate for this country that till now villages and farmers have not been considered as villagers and farmers, instead they were taken as numbers for votes or have been advertised as backwards.

If we keep raising our hands in favour or in support of these practices and notions, we would be doing one of the biggest harm to our nation, our culture, civilisation and India's existence. As long as Indian farmer and villagers will not have a good life and as long as they are unable to do their work with pride and support from every citizen of this country, I doubt that India's dream of becoming a great nation would ever get fulfilled. You may have visited many countries and may have already seen that each and every developed nation has a great farming community and vibrant villages.

I am anticipating through this letter that this Mahaygana which is performed with the help of different sections of society will also have the moral support of Honourable Prime Minister and the government which is under your leadership as well as other regional governments and the respective leaders. I am also anticipating that when my kind of fakir is trying to learn and understand the problem of villagers, of our farmers, government shall also try to understand their real problems. I thank you on behalf of millions of farmers for launching Kisaan TV, but still considerable work has to be done. The message of Indian government has to reach from Gram Panchayat to block level.

India has had suffered long by a disease known as corruption, which has killed the growth and development of villages, as the people living in rural heartland are simple and most of the time unaware of their moral and legal rights.

I strongly believe that India's future exists in Indian rural heartland and only after its ascent; Indian can take the ascent globally.

Wishes

Vivék ji
